(Regulation and Abolition) Act, 1970 and the Building & Other Construction Workers (Regulation of Employment and Conditions of Service) Act, 1996 to protect the interests of contract labour and construction workers respectively. The Contract Labour (Regulation and Abolition) Act, 1970 regulates the employment of contract labour in certain establishments and provides for its abolition in certain circumstances. These Acts and the rules made thereunder also provide for the regulation of conditions of work, payment of wages and other amenities relating to welfare, health and safety of these workers. Provisions of these Acts are considered adequate for meeting all bonafide concerns in respect of these workers. However, in the light of the experience gathered in the administration of the Contract Labour (Regulation and Abolition) Act, 1970 and the judgements of various courts, a review of this Act, with a view to restructure and bring it in tune with the changing times, has been undertaken.
